2 - Black Tea

Black Tea is extracted from the leaves of the Camellia sinesis plant, the same as green tea and white tea, but differs in the way they are harvested and prepared.

This tea has a higher concentration of caffeine and polyphenols, greatly increasing metabolism and fat burning.

Black Tea Ingredients

- 2 tablespoons of the black leaf of Camellia sinesis.

Method of preparation

- Put 1 liter of water on the fire and as soon as it starts to boil, turn off the flame, add the herb and let it rest for 3 minutes.
- Strain the tea and drink about 200 ml hot or iced without sugar.
- Avoid drinking black tea in the evening, as the high amount of caffeine can disrupt your sleep.
